

Gurpinder Singh

Project Proposal

Are housing prices and quality of school correlated in California? I think this question is extremely interesting because many times people look at schools when they are buying a home. Looking closely at the topic will give us insights into the inequalities that people who can buy more expensive homes will have their kids go to better schools. Quality will be measured through a variety of ways and data points. The data I wish to analyze is housing data provided through zillow which is a very reputable source. I will measure the quality of school through the testing scores, budgeting and a variety of other factors. The data was collected by people buying homes and through records taken for test scores inside of California.